MEMORY AND THE MEDIEVAL NORTH

In recent years, the field of Memory Studies has emerged as a key approach in the Humanities and Social Sciences, and has increasingly shown its ability to open new windows on Nordic Studies as well. A recently published handbook on memory in Pre-Modern Nordic culture documents the work-to-date of this approach on the pre-modern Nordic world while the volumes in the new series often build on and extend the work of the international research network Memory and the Pre-Modern North. We encourage researchers from various disciplines to submit manuscripts for consideration.

New series, first volume forthcoming 2021
ISSN 2699-7339
eISSN 2699-7347

The series focuses on cultural memory studies in relation to the extensive and varied Nordic cultural goods from, and since, pre-modern times. Its interdisciplinary monographs and essay collections analyze the roles of memory, remembrance, commemoration, and other forms of anamnesis in, and deriving from, the Viking and Middle Ages in Scandinavia.
